A MILLION BUDS

PROJECT

In the wake of the post-pandemic era, the world faced an unsettling truth: child labor had surged by a staggering 8.4 million children over the last four years increasing the total count to 160 million worldwide. This alarming statistic is becoming a major concern as young souls from less privileged backgrounds are forced to abandon their dreams and ambitions, all for the sake of survival.

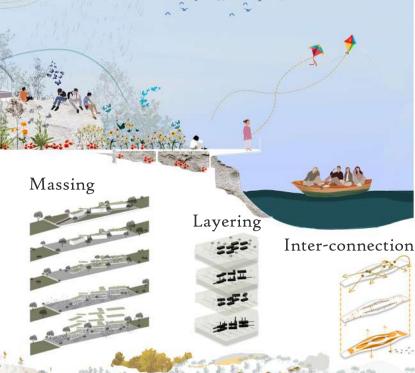

Many children from low-income families found themselves indirectly forced into labor to help their struggling families make ends meet.

This project is a new approach of architecture, that aims to cater a need of our time.

To create an environment where trapped young minds can grow from the harsh and rigid circum-stances, they find themselves in. Allowing them to bud in a more nurturing and vibrant world where life is truly celebrated.
